What Am I proud about:

"In this phase of our project, we have accomplished a significant milestone by detecting the user's location, providing details such as city, state, latitude, and longitude, and displaying the map on the screen with the help of the Google Maps API. Users can also search for any location on the map, and the location will be displayed with the assistance of place markers.

Additionally, we have created a webpage for nutritional values of food. The data is stored in the Firebase database, and nutritional values will be displayed when users search for a specific food.

Furthermore, we have enhanced the 'forgot password' option on the login page. This feature allows users to enter their email address, and a link to reset the password will be sent to their email. We have also included blog articles and food recommendations based on user's BMI."

Next steps:
We just need to add more data in the database and to update CSS.
